

ABSTRACT

The present invention applies illustratively to an optical disk apparatus that handles an index file formed by a series of entries comprising extract information about files. In operation, the apparatus organizes a plurality of still picture files into a single movie file and registers anew the movie file into the index file.